

Co-Active Coaching Courses

Our Next Fundamentals Course : April 17th-19th

Two and a half days of training in the Fundamentals of Co-Active Coaching which is the foundation of all of CTI's coach training courses delivered in Paris, France by two multi-cultural, multi-lingual facilitators.

Whether you are looking to integrate new coaching skills and competencies into your professional life, whether you are toying with the idea of becoming a coach, or that you simply may just be interested in taking a course in personal development – the Fundamentals of Coaching has something for everyone. One thing is guaranteed: this course will most definitely improve your listening and communication skills!

The Co-Active Coaching Model was founded by CTI (the Coaches Training Institute) in California in 1992.

Today CTI exists in 14 other countries: www.thecoaches.com CTI has trained over 20,000 coaches, consultants, and managers from many different parts of the globe. CTI was also the first coaching school to be accredited by the ICF (the International Coaching Federation).

CTI's unique way of teaching, learning by doing, is an incredibly effective method which was Co-Actively developed by its co-founders Henry Kimsey-House, Karen Kimsey-House, and Laura Whitworth who also wrote the book Co-Active Coaching: New Skills for Coaching People Toward Success in Work and Life.

The Co-Active Method puts an emphasis on the interaction between the participants and the trainers- it's a pragmatic and effective approach which relies on numerous coaching exercises to get immediate results and feedback. It's highly experiential, playful, and is not based on theory which simply gets stored in the brain. The skills which are taught are immediately put into practice.

At the end of the Fundamentals course you will certainly have a very clear idea of what coaching can do for you.

Please note that our courses also exists in French – next “Fondamentaux” : June 26th-28th

Here are a couple of testimonials from some of our participants:

"Have fun" ! That's what I usually tell my daughters right before they take off to school in the morning. This time these words were said to me by Lourdès Gutierrez from Paris Playground/CTI France.

I began a coaching training program. Where ? At Paris Playground / CTI France. With whom? With men and women who like myself have a close or distant link with the world of coaching. Which program? They call it the Fundamentals of coaching, a program which is accredited by the ICF (International Coach Federation). It's a unique program where both the coach and the client are co-creators of a relationship.

I learned, I coached, I was coached, I observed, I tried, I made mistakes (that's an integral part of the training), I got feedback and on top of that, I discovered that coaching is really for me! I left every evening in total astonishment and rather exhausted, due to the fact that I decided to challenge myself doubly by trying to learn this new method and by doing it in English (not my mother tongue). Of course, this training also exists in French. However in the English courses I found the richness of being in a multi-cultural environment with Dutch, Flemish, Spaniards, British, Irish, and Americans . . . Yes, I can!

Anna Piot, Journalist and Coach, November 20th 2008

Your 3-day Fundamentals workshop is much, much more than Coaching 101. It's "human alchemy", for want of a better word. It's potent and -- coaching aside -- has long-term (make that life-long) benefits and repercussions. What you're doing is waking people up and re-generating their aliveness. Coaching is just the excuse. Anyone with half an ounce of under-exercised humanity will blossom and re-discover life. Everyone in the class did. Was ours an exception?

If you were to effectively re-brand and re-market the Coaching Fundamentals course as Aliveness 101, you would have standing room only and a long waiting list!
